About Ludhiana

Ludhiana or Lodhiana is called after Lodhis, the dynasty which ruled Delhi from A.D. 1451 to 1526. Ludhiana city is known as the industrial hub of Punjab; it is also known as the Manchester of India. However, Ludhiana's claim to fame is not its commercial enterprise alone. In Cultural and Educational fields, Ludhiana holds an outstanding place. Punjab Agricultural University, Guru Nanak Dev Engineering College & Christian Medical College and Hospital, Dayanand Medical College & Hospital, Law colleges, Graduate & Post- Graduate colleges and a good number of high-tech teacher training colleges are some of the premier educational and research institutes. Really, Ludhiana offers a mesmerizing quick look into the world of machines tempered with a thriving human touch.

How to Reach Ludhiana

The Ludhiana District is very well connected in terms of roadways and railways. NH1-Grand Trunk road passes through the city, which connects it to Indian capital city Delhi and to other important cities of Punjab. The city is also well connected by rail network to Delhi and other important cities of Punjab.

About the Conference

The capacity for leadership arises out of powerful learning experiences and opportunities for leadership. The symbiosis of leadership and learning is reflected in the powerful connections between teacher's development of professional leadership and professional development.

Mentoring is increasingly being recognized as a valuable tool for Continuing Professional Development (CPD) by teacher educators and trainers. Mentor training and experiences can also build mentors' capacity for leadership through structured professional development including training and experience in classroom observation and coaching skills. The benefits of mentoring programs are substantial for both mentee (novice teacher) and mentor teachers.

The organising institute of the Conference, Partap College of Education is a research-intensive institute that is keen on international collaborations.
